Elucidation of the Pattachitra Painting:

- The above painting depicted Dancing Ganesha with Dholok Pattachitra Painting.
- Nritya Ganapati is regarded as the 15th among the 32 different forms of Ganapati. The Sanskrit word 'Nritya' means 'dance.' Nritya Ganapati, as the name suggests, is a dancer or a happy dancer, and thus represents the relaxed and enjoyable form of the Lord.
- Canvas preparation is done by coating the clothing with a mixture of chalk and gum.
- After that, it is smoothed with two different stones and then the cloth is dried.
- Pattachitra is an ancient art of living art form of Odisha.

Significance of Lord Ganesha:

- He is the son of Shiva and his consort Parvati, both of human form and yet he bears the head of an elephant.
- It is said that when Shiva was away. She decided to create a child and did this by forming him, by molding a substantial accumulation of her body dirt. And so Ganesh was born and Parvati was happy and occupied.
- He is usually worshipped as the elephant-headed god of commencements.
- His name Ganesha means Lord of the people, where Gana means people and Isha means leader.
- Lord Ganesha was born on the Chaturthi Tithi of Shukla Paksha in the Bhadrapada month.
